The Conservative election triumph was potentially good news for the estimated one million British expats who cannot vote because they have been out of the country for more than 15 years. The party pledged in its manifesto to abolish the controversial '15-year rule' – introduced under Tony Blair's Labour administration – so that all Britons overseas can vote in their last constituency.

Lifted by the full force of his propaganda machine, Putin is riding a wave of national pride into the annual May 9 parade on Red Square that marks Adolf Hitler's defeat in World War II. The leaders of key allies who spilled blood alongside the Red Army won't celebrate with Putin now. They will stay away to protest his support for the revolt in Ukraine, a land ravaged by both sides of what Russians call the Great Patriotic War, which claimed as many as 27 million Soviet lives.
